

Lyn Gardiner Guardian reviews - online - The Guide

Theatre Blog 27th Nov 2009

Reckless Sleepers are at the Curve in Leicester with The Pilots today and tomorrow, and with the excellent The Last Supper from next Wednesday.

● The Last Supper Bristol

Have you ever felt like eating your words? In Reckless Sleeper's intimate and haunting performance piece the cast do just that. Or rather they eat the last words of an array of famous and infamous people and characters ranging from Marilyn Monroe and Rasputin to the Wicked Witch of the West and Lord Nelson. Fortunately for them, these last words are written on rice paper. In fact, this entire evening revolves around the idea of eating, because between these words are 13 meals on silver platters which represent the last meal requests of as many inmates on death row. These meals are served to 13 members of the audience, who might view differently depending on whether they get chocolate cake or liver and onions with cottage cheese. It is a clever little piece that considers the way last words are manipulated to suit history's victors and also gives voice to the voiceless. LG

Arnolfini, Fri 25 & May 26

38 The Guide

May 19-25 2007

Theatre Blog 20th Nov 2009

Good, too, when theatres bring companies in out of the cold, which is what has happened with Reckless Sleepers at the Curve in Leicester. There's a mini-residency that includes Spanish Train and The Pilots this coming week, but the show of theirs that I really love, The Last Supper, is on the following week.

Book now to sample the last words and meal requests of those on death row. It's very powerful.

The Last Supper Bristol May 19th 2007

Have you ever felt like eating your words? In Reckless Sleeper's intimate and haunting performance piece the cast do just that. Or rather they eat the last words of an array of famous and infamous people and characters ranging from Marilyn Monroe and Rasputin to the Wicked Witch of the West and Lord Nelson. Fortunately for them, these last words are written on rice paper. In fact, this entire evening revolves around the idea of eating, because between these words are 13 meals on silver platters which represent the last meal requests of as many inmates on death row. These meals are served to 13 members of the audience, who might view differently depending on whether they get chocolate cake or liver and onions with cottage cheese. It is a clever little piece that considers the way last words are manipulated to suit history's victors and also gives voice to the voiceless.